Dr. Joshua Lederberg,
Dept. of Genetics,
Wisconsin University,
Madison 6, Wisconsin.

Dear Dr. Lederberg:

Heartiest thanks for your letter of January 2nd. I well know how very pressed you must be for time, and deeply appreciate your help.

I have concluded that since this article seems rather unclear to you, and since you are not sure that you understand it, the reader is sure not to understand it and certain to be confused. I am therefore returning the chapter to Dr. Dodd. I am quoting you, without naming you, and suggesting that he re-write the paper and submit it as a chapter of our next symposium volume.

Under separate cover I am sending you a copy of "Main Currents in Modern Thought," which contains an article dealing with the latest developments of Coaction Theory. This is the closest I can come to an offprint. At the same time I am placing your name on the publisher's list for early notification of the appearance of "Introduction to Unified Science."

I am, With warmest thanks and sincere regards,

Cordially yours,

Edward F. Haskell
